For a long time, television viewers thought of Art Carney mainly as Jackie Gleason's "second banana"—the meek and somewhat bemused sewer worker who made a perfect foil for Gleason's bluster and bombast.

Carney always was an actor, not a comic, however. Man and role finally came together in Harry and Tonto, a film about a 72-year-old wanderer and his pet cat. This Spring, his peers gave Carney their highest accolade, the Motion Picture Academy's Oscar as Best Actor of 1974.

Harry and Tonto, premiering June 15, is a standout in the month's Home Box Office schedule. Bitter, tender, sad and funny in turn, the film is laden with insights—as well as salty language and occasional actions to match, which gained it an "R" rating.

Animallegory—June is a rewarding month for Home Box Office movie buffs who may have thought basketball and hockey playoffs would never end. Worthy of special notice is Animal Farm, the first truly adult cartoon when produced 20 years ago. A team of 100 artists worked for three years to make the film, and more than 300,000 color drawings were used in the final print. True to George Orwell's 1946 political fable, the film remains fresh and meaningful today—an unusual motion picture experience conveying different levels of meaning to all ages.

Matinee Time—Beginning July 4, Home Box Office will present additional motion picture programming every Wednesday afternoon at 3 p.m. and Friday afternoon at 1 p.m. Premiere of the "HBO Friday Matinee" series on July 4 will be Peter Bogdanovich's 1930s-type musical, At Long Last Love, starring Burt Reynolds, Cybill Shepherd and Madeline Kahn and featuring 16 Cole Porter songs.

Movie Quiz—How's your movie memory? Watch next month's Entertainment Guide for details of a unique HBO contest, combining a chance at exciting prizes with a test of film wisdom.

HBO SPECIALS

Do you sketch? Draw? Or just doodle?

In any case, an interesting HBO program premiering June 8 is "Freehand Sketching", a basic but comprehensive telecourse conducted by Bruce McIntyre, for 12 years a chief animator with Walt Disney Studios. Half-hour segments will be seen on Sunday and Wednesday afternoons throughout the summer and fall.

A pad and pencil are the necessary materials to follow along, but also available is a 75-page lesson-by-lesson workbook developed by McIntyre and the Coast Community College District (Los Angeles), producer of the telecourse. Use the coupon on this page to order the workbook.

Also in June, HBO's continuing series, "The Artist's Eye", will present a special with host Russell Connor in Europe.

Out of the Garret—For small fry who wonder if HBO's Martha ever leaves her attic, it happens in June. An accomplished equestrienne, comely Ms. Lewis will team with sportscaster Spencer Ross to describe the posh Devon Horse Show on June 7 and the rough-and-ready Cowtown Rodeo June 21 and 29. In between, she'll be hosting an hour-long program June 11 to introduce a group of animated versions of classic fairy tales.

As for Martha's Attic, two young guests, Philip Farber and Paul Bennett, will show Martha and her viewers a seven-foot python, giant bullfrog and other pets on "Herpetiles", a program about reptiles and amphibians. Other kid fare: Professor Moffett's Science Workshop . . . more cliffhanger "Journey to the Beginning of Time" episodes . . . and "The Last Rhino" from Children's Film Foundation.

Sports Fun and Games, Summer- -style

Things are looking up for those two exciting newcomers to the New York and HBO sports scene, Catfish Hunter of the Yankees and Billie Jean King of the World Team Tennis entry, the Sets. After a slow start, Catfish is earning his $3.5 million stipend for joining the Yanks. Billie Jean didn't waste time on a slow beginning. As this month's Guide went to press, Billie Jean had sparked the Sets to five straight team wins without defeat. The Sets will be seen three times and the Yankees four times on HBO in June.

Horsin' Around—HBO takes a look in June at two distinctly different varieties of horsemanship. On June 7, finals of the Devon Horse Show, creme de la creme of society equine competitions, will be seen in a two-and-a-half hour special from Philadelphia's Main Line. On June 21 and 29, the network's cameras shift to the Cowtown Rodeo at Woodstown, N.J., for competition in bare back and saddle bronc riding, Brahma bull riding, calf roping and steer wrestling.

Something old as well as something new will be a part of the June sports schedule as HBO picks up for the third straight year the summer tournament circuit of the Professional Bowlers Association. Finals of the $50,000 Portland, Ore., Open will be seen June 24 as the first of eight Tuesday night bowling shows.
